

Database Management Systems (DBMS) are software systems designed to manage databases. They provide an interface for users to create, retrieve, update, and manage data systematically. DBMSes ensure data consistency, security, and integrity. Popular models include relational, NoSQL, and in-memory databases..