

Normalization

Normalization is the process of organizing data in a database.

It includes creating tables and establishing relationships among them according to rules designed both to protect the data

SQL Joins

SQL joins are used to query data from two or more tables, based on a relationship between certain columns in these tables

Indexing

Indexing is a way to optimize the performance of a database by minimizing the number of disk accesses required when